CHAPTER 1 INTRODUCTION

Film making is a creative form of visual communication that combines storytelling, acting, cinematography, sound, lighting and editing to communicate an idea or experience to an audience. A short film presents a complete story within a limited duration, making it important to develop a clear concept and use every scene effectively.

Radio podcasting, on the other hand, communicates stories through audio elements such as narration, dialogue, music, sound effects and silence. Both forms require creativity, planning and effective storytelling.

The project titled "The Choice" is a short drama and social-awareness film developed as part of the Film Making and Radio Podcasting course. The story follows Arun, a young man who regularly trains physically through push-ups, shadow fighting, wall punching and jogging. His physical discipline is contrasted with a difficult emotional challenge: controlling his anger.

While walking in a public place wearing earphones, Arun accidentally bumps into another person. The other person reacts angrily and insults him. Arun becomes angry and imagines himself using his fighting skills to attack the person, followed by police intervention and regret.

The sequence then returns to reality, revealing that the fight and arrest never actually happened. Arun chooses to apologize and avoid the conflict.

The film communicates the idea that physical strength does not justify violence and that avoiding an unnecessary confrontation can be a stronger decision than winning a fight.

CHAPTER 2 PROJECT OVERVIEW

The main idea of The Choice is to present an ordinary public misunderstanding as a moment in which the protagonist must choose between anger and self-control.

The opening workout sequence establishes Arun as physically capable and disciplined. Push-ups, shadow fighting, wall punching and jogging create an expectation that the physical ability shown at the beginning may become important later.

The public encounter provides the turning point. Arun accidentally bumps into Rahul while listening to music. Rahul becomes irritated and uses insulting language.

Arun's response is initially controlled, but the insult triggers his anger. The story then moves into an imagined sequence in which Arun gives in to his anger and uses his fighting ability against Rahul.

The imagined police arrest shows the possible consequences of that decision. Arun pleads with the officer and apologizes for his anger.

The sequence then returns to the real situation and gives Arun a second choice. He apologizes, Rahul also acknowledges his reaction, and both continue their separate paths.

The project is designed to be practical to produce with a small cast, a home location for the workout scenes and a park or public walking area for the main conflict.

CHAPTER 3 TITLE – THE CHOICE

The title “THE CHOICE” is directly connected to the central idea of the story. At the beginning, rework refers to the process of making corrections to the video. The audience is shown a complete imagined confrontation in which Arun attacks another person, is stopped by the police and regrets his actions. Later, the story reveals that the fight existed only in Arun's imagination.

The word “fight” therefore has two meanings. It refers to the physical confrontation imagined by Arun, but it also represents the internal struggle between his anger and his ability to control himself.

The phrase “we never had” reveals the positive consequence of his final decision: the physical conflict does not actually occur.

The title also supports the message that the strongest decision can sometimes be to prevent a conflict before it begins.

CHAPTER 4 GENRE

The film belongs primarily to the Drama and Social Awareness genres, with elements of Action and Psychological Visualization.

The drama is created through the emotional change experienced by Arun during the confrontation. The action element appears in the imagined fight sequence and the workout montage.

The psychological element comes from the transition between reality and imagination. The audience is temporarily led to believe that Arun has attacked Rahul and is being arrested. The return to reality creates the main twist of the film.

The major storytelling elements used are:

- Workout montage
- Accidental collision
- Verbal confrontation
- Internal anger and hesitation
- Imagined fight sequence
- Imagined police arrest
- Return to reality
- Mutual apology
- Final message about avoiding conflict

The combination of these elements allows the film to communicate a social message while maintaining audience interest.

CHAPTER 5 OBJECTIVES

The main objective of the project is to create an engaging short film using simple film-making techniques to communicate a clear message about anger management and conflict avoidance.

The specific objectives are:

- To develop an original short-film story with a clear beginning, conflict, climax and resolution.
- To understand screenplay and scene development.
- To demonstrate physical acting and emotional performance.
- To use cinematography to distinguish reality from imagination.
- To use lighting to support the emotional change in the protagonist.
- To create tension through sound effects, music and silence.
- To practice editing techniques such as montage, rapid cuts and transitions.
- To communicate a social message without relying on excessive dialogue.

CHAPTER 6 STORY DEVELOPMENT

The story was developed around the idea that a person can be physically strong but still need to develop emotional control.

The opening was intentionally designed around exercise and martial-arts-inspired practice so that the audience would notice Arun's physical ability before the public conflict occurs.

The second stage introduces an ordinary situation. Arun is walking in a public place while listening to music. His accidental collision with Rahul is not intentionally harmful. Rahul's angry reaction creates the first external conflict.

The story then moves from external conflict to internal conflict. Arun's clenched fist, heartbeat and closed eyes signal that he is imagining a response.

The fight sequence represents what could happen if he allows his anger to control his actions.

The imagined police arrest increases the consequences. Arun realizes that a moment of anger could result in injury, embarrassment, legal trouble and regret.

This becomes the emotional turning point.

The story then returns to reality and gives Arun a second choice. He apologizes instead of fighting.

This development allows the film to show that the main conflict is not actually between Arun and Rahul. The main conflict is Arun versus his own anger.

CHAPTER 7 STORY SYNOPSIS

The film begins early in the morning with Arun exercising at home. He performs push-ups, shadow fighting and wall punching before going outside for a jog.

The sequence establishes him as disciplined, energetic and physically strong.

Later, Arun is walking through a park or public place while listening to music through earphones. He is not fully attentive to his surroundings and accidentally bumps into Rahul.

Rahul becomes irritated and scolds him for not watching where he is going.

Arun apologizes, but Rahul continues speaking angrily and insults him.

Arun becomes emotionally affected. He closes his eyes and clenches his fists. The sound of his heartbeat increases as the story moves into an imagined sequence.

In Arun's imagination, he attacks Rahul using the fighting ability established in the opening scenes.

Rahul falls and asks him to stop.

A police officer arrives and arrests Arun for fighting in public.

Arun pleads with the officer and admits that he has anger issues. He asks the officer to release him and expresses regret.

The imagined sequence suddenly freezes.

Arun opens his eyes and returns to the actual park.

Rahul is still standing in front of him and no fight has occurred.

Arun realizes what could have happened if he had acted on his anger.

Arun calmly apologizes for not watching where he was going.

Rahul also apologizes for shouting.

They separate peacefully.

The camera moves upward toward the sky and the final message appears:

“THE BEST FIGHT IS THE ONE THAT WE AVOID.”

CHAPTER 8 CHARACTERS

8.1 Arun

Arun is the main character of the film.

He is a young man who is physically active and capable of fighting. His character is introduced through action rather than dialogue.

The workout sequence communicates discipline, energy and physical strength.

However, Arun's important character trait is his struggle with anger.

He is initially triggered by an insult, but the imagined consequences allow him to recognize the danger of reacting impulsively.

His character arc moves from:

Anger → Aggression → Imagination → Regret → Realization → Self-Control

Arun's final decision not to fight represents his emotional growth.

8.2 Rahul

Rahul is the person Arun accidentally bumps into.

He represents the external trigger for the conflict.

Rahul reacts angrily and questions Arun's attention. His words increase Arun's frustration.

However, Rahul also changes during the resolution. After Arun apologizes, Rahul realizes that his own reaction was also unnecessary and apologizes.

8.3 Police Officer

The police officer appears only in the imagined sequence.

The officer represents the possible consequences of uncontrolled public violence.

The officer's role is not to become a major character but to show Arun what could happen if he chooses violence.

The officer's authoritative presence increases the seriousness of the imagined consequences.

CHAPTER 9 SCENE DEVELOPMENT

9.1 Scene 1 – Morning Workout

The opening scene introduces Arun through a sequence of physical exercises.

Close and medium shots can show:

- Push-ups
- Shadow fighting
- Wall punching
- Facial expressions
- Breathing
- Exercise movements

The purpose is to establish his physical ability and create visual interest immediately.

9.2 Scene 2 – Jogging

Arun leaves his home and begins jogging.

The jogging scene creates a transition from the private workout environment to the public location where the main conflict occurs.

Footsteps and breathing can be used as natural sound elements.

9.3 Scene 3 – Walking in the Park

Arun puts on his earphones and listens to music while walking.

The environment initially feels peaceful.

The use of music can reduce the sound of the approaching him.

9.4 Scene 4 – Accidental Collision

Arun accidentally bumps into Rahul.

Rahul becomes angry and questions Arun's attention.

Example dialogue:

RAHUL:
“Where are you looking?”

ARUN:
“Sorry, bro.”

RAHUL:
“Walking with earphones like you're the only person on the road.”

Arun tries to remain calm, but Rahul continues to criticize him.

9.5 Scene 5 – Anger Trigger

Rahul's final insult becomes the emotional trigger.

Arun's hand slowly forms a fist.

His breathing becomes heavier.

The sound of his heartbeat begins.

Arun closes his eyes.

This creates the transition between reality and imagination.

9.6 Scene 6 – Imagined Fight

The fight is presented as a visualization of what Arun could do if he gives in to his anger.

The workout movements from the opening scenes are reused as visual matches.

The editing becomes faster as the violence increases.

Rahul eventually falls and asks Arun to stop.

9.7 Scene 7 – Police Arrest

A police officer arrives in the imagined sequence.

The officer stops Arun and arrests him for fighting in public.

Arun becomes frightened by the consequences.

He pleads with the officer.

ARUN:
“Sir, please. I'm sorry.”

He admits that he has anger issues and asks to be released.

9.8 Scene 8 – Return to Reality

The imagined sequence freezes.

The sound stops.

Arun opens his eyes.

He is back in the park.

Rahul is still standing in front of him.

There is no police officer.

There has been no fight.

The audience understands that everything after Arun closed his eyes was an imagined consequence.

9.9 Scene 9 – Apology and Resolution

Arun chooses not to fight.

He says:

ARUN:
“Sorry. It was my mistake. I should have been careful.”

Rahul realizes that he also reacted too strongly.

RAHUL:

“It's okay. Sorry for shouting.”

Both move on.

The camera slowly rises toward the sky.

The final message appears.

CHAPTER 10 CLIMAX AND ENDING

The climax occurs inside Arun's imagination when the fight escalates and a police officer arrests him.

The sequence represents the possible consequences of losing control.

Arun's plea for forgiveness shows that he understands the seriousness of his imagined actions.

The most important transition occurs when the imagined sequence freezes and Arun opens his eyes.

The audience realizes that the arrest, injuries and fight were never real.

Arun is still standing in the park with Rahul.

The ending is intentionally simple.

Arun chooses to apologize rather than continue the argument.

Rahul accepts the apology and also recognizes his own mistake.

The two characters cross paths without further conflict.

The final upward camera movement changes the scale of the story from a personal argument to a broader social message.

The film ends with:

“THE BEST FIGHT IS THE ONE THAT WE AVOID.”

An optional supporting message can also be displayed:

“ANGER IS A MOMENT. THE CONSEQUENCES CAN LAST MUCH LONGER.”

CHAPTER 11 CINEMATOGRAPHY

Cinematography is used to establish the physical energy of the opening and the emotional tension of the confrontation.

The workout sequence can use close-ups of:

- Hands
- Fists
- Feet
- Face
- Sweat
- Exercise movements

Medium shots can be used to show Arun performing the exercises.

During the park sequence, wider shots can establish the public environment.

Medium shots can show Arun and Rahul during the conversation.

Close-ups become increasingly important when Arun's anger develops.

A close-up of Arun's clenched fist can act as a visual symbol of the conflict.

The imagined fight can use:

- Faster cuts
- Tighter framing
- Handheld shots
- Low-angle shots
- Close-ups
- Reaction shots

When reality returns, the camera becomes calmer and wider.

The final camera movement toward the sky provides a visual release from the tension of the imagined fight.

CHAPTER 12 LIGHTING

The opening workout can use natural morning light or simple room lighting to create a realistic environment.

Stronger contrast can be used during the wall-punching sequence to emphasize physical intensity.

The park scenes should use natural daylight because the conflict occurs in an ordinary public environment.

The imagined fight can be made visually different through:

- Stronger contrast
- Slightly darker exposure
- Directional lighting
- Stronger shadows

This difference helps the audience subconsciously understand that the imagined sequence is different from normal reality.

When Arun returns to reality, the lighting should return to the natural appearance of the park.

The final sky shot can use natural daylight to create a calm ending after the intensity of the imagined sequence.

CHAPTER 13 SOUND DESIGN

Sound is important because the film uses the contrast between peaceful walking, rising anger and imagined violence.

The workout sequence can include:

- Breathing
- Footsteps
- Push-up movement
- Punching impacts
- Subtle motivational music

During the park scene, music from Arun's earphones can initially dominate the soundtrack.

When Rahul begins speaking, the music can become quieter.

As Arun becomes angry, his heartbeat can gradually become louder.

Important sound elements include:

- Footsteps
- Exercise and breathing sounds
- Punch impact sounds
- Morning ambience
- Park ambience
- Earphone music
- Dialogue
- Heartbeat
- Fight impact effects
- Police-related sound effects
- Silence before the reality reveal
- Final calm background ambience

Silence is especially important immediately before Arun opens his eyes.

The sudden absence of sound can make the transition more noticeable.

CHAPTER 14 EDITING TECHNIQUES

Editing is central to the film because the story depends on the audience temporarily believing that the imagined fight is real.

The opening workout can use montage editing.

Short shots of:

- Push-ups
- Shadow fighting
- Wall punching
- Jogging

can establish the character quickly without spending excessive screen time.

The argument should use conventional shot-reverse-shot editing to maintain clarity.

As Arun becomes angry, cuts can become shorter and the sound can become more intense.

The imagined fight can use rapid cuts and repeated visual motifs from the workout.

For example, a shadow-fighting punch can cut directly to a fight punch.

This creates a connection between physical training and imagined violence.

The transition back to reality can be created using:

- Freeze frame
- Sudden silence
- Cut to black
- Match cut
- Eye-opening close-up

The ending should use longer shots and slower editing to communicate calmness.

The final upward camera movement can be followed by a fade to black before displaying the message.

CHAPTER 15 USE OF PROPS AND LOCATION

The project is designed to use simple locations and easily available props.

This makes the film practical for a student production.

Locations

The major locations are:

- Bedroom or home workout area
- Wall or suitable safe practice surface
- Street or jogging path
- Park or public walking area

Props

The major props and production items are:

- Mobile phone
- Earphones
- Workout clothes
- Water bottle
- Sports shoes
- Table or household workout space
- Optional police identification/prop for the imagined sequence

The fight sequence should be staged safely.

No actual punches should make contact.

The appearance of punches can be created using:

- Camera angles
- Reaction shots
- Sound effects
- Editing
- Controlled movement

This approach keeps the production safe while maintaining the visual impact of the scene.

CHAPTER 16 RADIO PODCAST ADAPTATION

The story can be adapted into a radio podcast by replacing visual action with narration, dialogue, sound effects and music.

The workout sequence can be communicated through breathing, footsteps, exercise sounds and narration.

The park collision can be established through footsteps, music from earphones, a sudden impact sound and dialogue between Arun and Rahul.

The imagined fight can be represented through:

- Fast breathing
- Punch sound effects
- Movement sounds
- Increasingly intense music

The police arrival can be identified through footsteps and dialogue.

The most important challenge in the podcast version is communicating the reality-to-imagination transition without visuals.

This can be achieved using:

- Sudden silence
- Heartbeat
- Short pause
- Change in background music
- Voice modulation

The final message can then be delivered by the narrator.

CHAPTER 17 RADIO PODCAST SCRIPT APPROACH

The podcast can begin with a narrator describing Arun waking early and beginning his workout.

Exercise sounds can be layered underneath the narration.

When Arun begins walking outside, footsteps and environmental sounds can establish the location.

The earphone music can be introduced before the collision.

When Rahul bumps into Arun, a sudden impact sound can interrupt the music.

The conversation can then be presented through voice acting.

During the suspense portion, the narration becomes slower and the background music becomes more intense.

The heartbeat can be played before the imagined sequence.

When the imagined fight occurs, punch effects and rapid breathing can be used without directly describing every physical action.

The police officer's dialogue communicates the consequence.

The podcast can then use a heartbeat and silence before Arun's voice returns to the normal environment.

The final apology can be followed by park ambience and a slow reduction in music before the closing message.

CHAPTER 18 VOICE AND AUDIO PERFORMANCE

Voice acting is important because the emotional change in Arun must be clear.

At the beginning, his voice should be calm and controlled.

During the confrontation, his voice should become shorter and more tense.

Rahul's voice should sound irritated during the argument but should become calmer during the final apology.

The police officer's voice should be firm and authoritative in the imagined sequence.

Important performance requirements include:

- Clear pronunciation
- Natural dialogue delivery
- Controlled speaking speed
- Emotional voice modulation
- Appropriate pauses
- Distinct character voices
- Realistic breathing
- Effective use of silence
- Synchronization between dialogue and sound effects

The voice performance should support the transition from reality to imagination and back to reality.

CHAPTER 19 PRODUCTION PROCESS

The production process can be divided into three stages:

19.1 Pre-Production

During pre-production, the story idea was developed into a screenplay.

The following elements were planned:

- Story
- Characters
- Locations
- Props
- Workout actions
- Conflict
- Imagined sequence
- Final message
- Camera shots
- Safety requirements

The action scenes were planned to avoid physical contact and unnecessary risk.

19.2 Production

During production, the following scenes are recorded:

- Workout scenes
- Jogging shots
- Park conversation
- Imagined fight
- Police sequence
- Final resolution

Multiple camera angles can be captured for the workout and confrontation scenes.

Separate close-ups of Arun's fists, eyes and facial expressions can be recorded for editing.

---

19.3 Post-Production

During post-production, the footage is organized according to the screenplay.

The workout montage is assembled first, followed by the park scenes and imagined fight.

The following are then added:

- Sound effects
- Background music
- Heartbeat
- Fight sounds
- Transitions
- Final message

The final video is reviewed for:

- Continuity
- Pacing
- Audio synchronization
- Visual clarity
- Story understanding
- Duration

The completed film is then exported in the required format.

CHAPTER 20 CHALLENGES FACED

One challenge is making the imagined fight clearly distinguishable from the real events without revealing the twist too early.

Camera, sound and editing must provide subtle clues while still allowing the audience to experience the imagined sequence.

Another challenge is filming the fight safely.

Actual physical contact should be avoided.

The appearance of punches can be created using camera angles, reaction shots, sound effects and editing.

Maintaining continuity between the workout sequence and fight sequence is another challenge.

The same movements must look believable when reused as imagined fighting actions.

Outdoor filming can also create challenges involving:

- Background noise
- Lighting changes
- People moving through the frame
- Wind
- Unwanted interruptions

These issues can be reduced by selecting a suitable time and location.

Audio synchronization is also important because dialogue, footsteps, music, heartbeat and fight effects must occur at the correct moments.

The reality reveal depends heavily on timing.

CHAPTER 21 LEARNING OUTCOMES

Through this project, practical skills can be developed in:

- Screenplay writing
- Scene planning
- Acting
- Cinematography
- Lighting
- Sound recording
- Video editing
- Visual storytelling
- Audio storytelling

The major learning outcomes are:

- Understanding how to develop a short-film concept.
- Writing scenes using screenplay structure.
- Using physical performance to introduce a character.
- Planning safe action sequences.
- Using cinematography to communicate emotion.
- Using sound and silence to build tension.
- Editing a sequence to create a false reality and reveal.
- Using locations and props efficiently.
- Understanding visual storytelling.
- Adapting a visual story into an audio podcast.

The project also demonstrates that a simple misunderstanding can become an effective cinematic conflict when supported by performance, sound, editing and a clear character decision.

CHAPTER 22 EXPECTED OUTCOME

The final outcome of the project is a five-minute short film titled "The Choice."

The film is expected to engage the audience through:

- An energetic opening
- A relatable public conflict
- An imagined action sequence
- A police consequence
- A reality reveal
- A peaceful resolution

The project demonstrates the practical use of:

- Cinematography
- Lighting
- Sound design
- Acting
- Editing
- Visual storytelling

The contrast between the imagined fight and the peaceful real ending is intended to make the central message clear.

The expected audience takeaway is that anger can turn a minor misunderstanding into a serious situation.

Choosing to apologize, walk away or avoid a confrontation can prevent consequences that cannot easily be reversed.

The film can also be adapted into a radio podcast, demonstrating how the same story can be communicated using narration, dialogue, music, sound effects and silence.

CHAPTER 23 CONCLUSION

The Choice demonstrates how a simple everyday misunderstanding can be developed into an engaging short film through visual storytelling.

The story begins with Arun's physical training and gradually moves toward a public confrontation in which his ability to control his anger becomes more important than his ability to fight.

The imagined fight and police arrest allow the audience to experience the consequences of an impulsive decision before revealing that the events never actually occurred.

This structure creates the film's main twist while supporting the message about anger management and conflict avoidance.

The project combines screenplay writing, acting, cinematography, lighting, sound design and video editing.

The use of a small number of characters and accessible locations demonstrates that an effective short film can be produced without complex production resources.

The final message,

“THE BEST FIGHT IS THE ONE THAT WE AVOID.”

summarizes the character's transformation.

Arun does not prove his strength by defeating another person. Instead, he demonstrates self-control by choosing not to fight.

Overall, The Choice provides practical experience in film making and radio podcasting while demonstrating the importance of conflict, character development, pacing, sound, visual language and audience engagement in short-form storytelling.
